

Greenbelt Honors Fallen Heroes on Memorial Day

by Butch Hicks

Greenbelt American Legion Post 136 officers joined Greenbelt City Council and county and state government representatives on May 26 at the city’s War Memorial for a solemn Memorial Day ceremony honoring those who died during the nation’s wars.

An audience of about 100 attended, including veterans wearing emblems of prior military service.

Ingrid Watson, District 4 Prince George’s County Councilmember, presented a proclamation recognizing fallen service members who “served with courage, distinction and bravery to preserve and protect the value of America’s democracy” and proclaiming Monday, May 26, 2025, a countywide day of observance

Greenbelt Mayor Emmett Jordan was joined by Councilmembers Silke Pope, Jenni Pompi, Rodney Roberts and Kristen Weaver, along with Maryland District 22 Delegates Nicole Williams and Anne Healey. Jordan expressed gratitude to American Legion Post 136 members for their exceptional leadership and service to Greenbelt and surrounding communities. Jordan asked Post 136’s commander, leaders of the Sons of the American Legion and Unit 136 Auxiliary to accept a proclamation from Greenbelt.

Council Considers $120,000 In Recognition Group Grants

by Carol Griffith

Two Greenbelt City Council worksessions with city Recognition Groups took place on Wednesday, May 14 and Monday, May 19. Representatives of a total of 18 (nine per session) groups attended in order to discuss their group’s request for in-kind or financial support for fiscal year 2026 (FY 2026) with council, City Manager Josué Salmerón and City Treasurer

Bertha Gaymon. City Recreation Director Greg Varda, at the May 14 session, and Arts Supervisor Nicole DeWald, at the May 19 session, also participated as the Recreation Department is responsible for administration of the community groups’ requests for support, which involves an evaluation committee and grant review panel. Requests for funding this year exceeded $150,000.

Recognition Groups are, according to city policy, organizations that “enhance the range of cultural, athletic, recreational, civic, service and social opportunities available to Greenbelt residents.” They must be not-for-profit and may not be a religious or political organization.

During the worksessions, the groups were frequently praised by council for their significant contributions to the life of the city. While this budget year is “difficult,” as Mayor Emmett Jordan noted, both he and the Recreation Department representatives stressed that the work done by the many volunteers of the recognition groups has saved

Council Reviews Public Safety Expenditures Ahead of Budget

by Oliver Gaycken

On April 30 City Council held a budget worksession to discuss public safety expenditures, which constitute approximately two thirds of the city’s annual budget. Under discussion were budget requests from the Greenbelt Volunteer Fire and Rescue Squad and the Greenbelt Police Department. Attending the worksession were Greenbelt Volunteer Fire Department and Rescue Squad President Greg Gigliotti and Firefighter and Emergency Medical Technician (EMT) Lisa Ray. The Greenbelt Police Department (GPD) was represented by its five-member command staff, led by Chief Richard Bowers.

ment of career firefighters and EMTs last summer. Subsequently the city and GVFD brought a lawsuit against the Prince George’s County Fire Department; the lawsuit is pending, and no court date has been set. No county personnel are currently assigned to Greenbelt’s Engine Company 35 but the station does

Two Greenbelt Women Learn Art Of Building an Earthen Oven

by Melissa Ann Ehrenreich

Greenbelters Jeannie Bellina and Melissa Ann Ehrenreich traveled on Mother’s Day, Sunday, May 11 to Pearlstone Retreat Center in Reisterstown to learn from former Greenbelter Joe Murray how to make an earthen, smokeless pizza oven using natural materials.

Inspired by stories of how Toronto public parks have created almost 20 pizza ovens for community use surrounded by gardens of tomatoes and basil, the duo registered for a Pearlstone Adamah service project to learn Cob Construction 101.

Murray shared materials, design specifications and wisdom on how to assess clay composition in dirt gathered locally, how to achieve the best mixture to create a thermal layer that could support temperatures of up to

Tree Planting

Jane Austen Wrecked My Life

Agathe (Camille Rutherford), hopelessly clumsy yet charming and full of contradictions, finds herself in desperate singlehood. Her dream is to experience love akin to a Jane Austen novel and her ultimate aspiration is to become a writer. Instead, she spends her days selling books in the legendary British Bookshop, Shakespeare & Co, in Paris. Invited to the Jane Austen Writers’ Residency in England, she must confront her insecurities to finally fulfill her ambition of becoming a novelist and put an end to wasting her sentimental life. Said critic Tara McNamara of Common Sense Media, “The film is fun for a girls’ night, but it’s also sneakily insightful in its portrayal of a woman who discovers that love doesn’t always come when you’re hungry for it – sometimes, it arrives when your plate is overflowing.”

Friendship

Suburban dad Craig (Tim Robinson) falls hard for his charismatic new neighbor (Paul Rudd), as Craig’s attempts to make an adult male friend threaten to ruin both of their lives. “It suggests not just a subversion but a putrefaction of the Ruddy-comedy genre – a portrait of male loneliness so totalizing, and so scarily close to the bone, that laughs and screams all but bleed together,” said critic Justin Chang of The New Yorker.

The Children’s Hour

Longtime friends Martha (Shirley MacLaine) and Karen (Audrey Hepburn) run a boarding school for girls. When an unruly child, Mary (Karen Balkin), is punished for lying, she concocts a story that Karen and Martha are having a lesbian relationship. When the story spreads, parents withdraw their children from the school. The women’s lawsuit for libel hits many snags when they lack witnesses to speak for them. All the stress adversely affects Karen’s engagement to Joe Cardin (James Garner).

While administering an insulin shot might seem scary, Junior takes his medicine like a champ. Junior's foster says he's a gentle soul. He's super affectionate and loves to be wherever the household action is. His favorite activity is sitting by the door or window and watching the local wildlife and ongoing outside (he's a great neighborhood watch). FY 2026 Budget

Council Meets for Green Ridge House Budget Worksession

by Anna Bedford-Dillow

On May 7 the Greenbelt City Council met at Green Ridge House for a budget worksession. The city opened Green Ridge House, a city-owned apartment building for seniors, in 1979. Opening the meeting, Mayor Emmett Jordan said 75 percent of the building’s revenue comes from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD), which subsidizes rents, and the remaining 25 percent comes from residents’ payments. “No city funds are expended on Green Ridge House,” explained Jordan. The May meeting was the first time council has held a session at the property since before the pandemic.

Highlights of accomplishments at Green Ridge House over the last year, shared at the meeting, include renovating the management office; seal coating and stripping the parking lot; installing new security cameras; ongoing work to have wi-fi as an amenity for residents; making four accessible units more accessible for those in wheelchairs and rollators, with plans to renovate more units as they become vacant; installing a new Key-track machine, which monitors all keys; purchasing new folding tables for events; and replacing windows as needed.

Revenue

Revenue for Green Ridge House comes in the form of rent split between portions paid by residents and portions subsidized by payments from HUD. The percentage split on average is 2:1, with HUD funds being the larger part, but that varies based on residents’ income. While there haven’t been interruptions in HUD payments to date, there has been a delay in reimbursement for the salary of the HUD service coordinator, who has been in place for the last five years.

The 101 units at Green Ridge House are in demand. The waiting list for an apartment is currently approximately 60 would-be tenants long. The list usually opens up once a year, when it gets down to about 30 names. On average 15 units a year turn over, said Green Ridge House Manager Kimberly Potts.

Expenses

Councilmember Danielle McKinney asked if management is projecting increases in gas and electric costs, as other Greenbelt residents are seeing. Steve Seh, regional property manager with the management company Community Realty, says they’ve projected a 4 percent increase.

Jordan noted an increase in the management fee, which Seh says is calculated as a percentage of revenue (4.5 percent), so the increase is due to an increase in revenue. Other expenses include insurance, which continues to increase, and legal fees for such things as landlord tenant issues.

There have been no big changes in service contractors, though they have changed the pest control company for one which is doing a better job, reported Potts. They’ve also changed elevator service to Alcon after the previous company began subbing out the work. The elevators, about four years old, are in good condition.

Investments and Reserves

The budget includes $38,500 in proposed revenue expected from the investment of reserve funds. Replacement reserves are funded at $300,000 annually, with approximately $1.7 million currently in the reserves, said Seh. Those can be used for capital expenses. Expenses projected for FY 2026 include replacing an HVAC riser at a cost of about $200,000, though this will be a multiyear project, with work performed between the heating and cooling seasons. There’s also $82,000 for painting the exterior of the building, said Seh.

Overall Budget

The net revenue for the 2026 proposed budget is $35,900. City Manager Josué Salmerón noted that this is down considerably from $189,830 in FY 2024. However, he said he is not concerned given that the healthy replacement reserves can cover the HVAC work and some other repairs.

Residents’ Association

The residents’ association was reported to be very active, hosting events, including trips, ceramics classes and a crab feast, among many others.

The service coordinator position, which is funded through the grant from HUD, was also cited as a boon to residents. The service coordinator links residents to resources and programs and acts like an off-shoot of the Greenbelt Assistance in Living (GAIL) program for residents at Green Ridge House, Christal Batey, GAIL resource advocate, explained. They manage all kinds of things like energy assistance programs, helping with renters’ tax credit, linking them with physical health and mental health services and assisting residents with specific concerns related to family or personal situations. “She’s their mini caseworker on site,” said Batey. They are still waiting to hear if that program will be funded on the federal level.

Resident Questions

Bob Rand, resident of the city but not Green Ridge House, said the demographics of Green Ridge House “significantly tilt toward white residents,” and he asked how the city could better market Green Ridge House to Black, Hispanic and Asian residents to effect “a more equitable distribution of city services for seniors” and a population better reflecting the city’s demographics. Rand cited a recent demographics report from city staff that identifies the population of Green Ridge House as 65 percent white, 28 percent Black, 4 percent Asian, 2 percent Hispanic and 1 percent of two or more races. Batey said there has been a large increase in residents of color at Green Ridge House following a shift of the aging population in Greenbelt. Batey would estimate that when she first arrived residents were 95 percent white. “It has grown tremendously so for us to be over 40 percent or 38 percent minority, that’s huge. The 62 and older population has historically been a white population here in the City of Greenbelt,” she notes. Residents of color have historically been more transient, relocating with jobs and so forth, she said.

Rand also asked about contingency plans in the face of possible Section 8 funding cuts. Salmerón responded that in the short term Green Ridge House has reserves. In the long term, possibilities include taking every possibility to get incremental increases through the HUD program and dedicating a portion of that toward social activities and social programming, said Salmerón. Considering HUD funding of rent, he says there is an active sand dome, fire brick and cob brick base that was previously constructed. After this final thermal layer fully dries for two weeks, Murray will cut an oven opening out of the clay structure, remove the sand inner core and then light a fire to cure the inside of the oven.

Participants were delighted with the hands-on approach and accessibility of construction, to say nothing of the low costs made possible by sourcing materials straight from the earth. They immediately began to think of ways to engage and bring this concept back to Greenbelt. Could our community build a community oven here to host pizza parties for all? Maybe so.

Art Pays It Forward, Benefit Art Sale for Greenbelt CARES

by Cynthia Swan

Abstract with Blue, one of the pieces of art available for purchase at the Art Pays It Forward benefit

A unique charity art sale will be held at the Community Center art gallery on Sunday, June 8 from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Greenbelt artist William Moats is donating over 50 paintings, prints and drawings from his lifetime of fine art production. Each piece will be available for a minimal donation that will directly support emergency rent and utility assistance through the Greenbelt CARES emergency fund. The benefit is an initiative of the Greenbelt Interfaith Leadership Association (GILA), sponsor of the Emergency Assistance Fund.

The art will be on exhibit for preview at the Community Center art gallery Tuesday, June 3 through Saturday, June 7. The gallery will be open 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. every day during the preview period.

The entire collection will be available for purchase during the Art Pays It Forward event. Visitors can make their selection, donate to Greenbelt Cares Emergency Assistance Fund and then take their new art with them as they leave.

Many members of the Greenbelt community struggle to meet their rent or utility bills. Like the Empty Bowls fundraiser, Art Pays It Forward invites all to join friends and neighbors in this creative way of paying it forward by providing a home for an affordable and original artwork while supporting those in need, symbolizing a community of caring.

Artist William Moats

“Artists want their work to be displayed and become a part of someone’s daily life,” says Moats. “As I’ve thought about all the art I’ve made over the years, I recognize the challenges artists face in trying to sell their work. At the same time, art lovers face a dilemma when wanting to acquire original art, but can’t realistically afford purchasing a new piece.

“I now find myself at a place in my life that I want to let go of these works to make room both physically and internally. I hope through this project I can share my work with our community while contributing to this worthwhile cause.”

For more information about the event, contact Nicole DeWald, arts supervisor, Greenbelt Recreation, at 240-542-2057 or ndewald@greenbeltmd.gov. Or email the artist at billmoats1@gmail.com.

Upcoming Art Shares

Participate in a relaxed show-and-tell event with other local art makers. All experience levels are welcome. Bring one to three pieces of artwork to present and discuss in a supportive environment.

An art share specifically for youth (ages 15 and under) will be held Thursday, June 5 from 4:30 to 5:30 p.m., with light refreshments provided. Sign up at sugeni.us/VEQd.

These events are sponsored by the Greenbelt Recreation Arts Program and will take place in Room 113 at the Community Center. For more information about the arts programs, visit greenbeltmd.gov/arts.

the city “hundreds of thousands of dollars.”

Basic Recognition Group Certification allows a group limited free use of Recreation Department facilities. Certification must be renewed annually. Once certified, eligible Recognition Groups may apply for a specific project grant or for an operating grant. Up to $5,000 in city matching funds may be granted for a discrete, time-limited project, or higher amounts of city matching funds may be applied to programming or operational expenses. There are additional requirements for each type of grant. All grant applications are reviewed by a Grant Review Panel that provides the city manager and council their findings and recommendations concerning eligibility or funding level.

The purposes of the worksessions were to provide council with the findings of the panel and to allow for council discussion of the groups’ requests and plans for the year. In the discussions, council questioned many groups about their efforts to reach and recruit in all parts of the city.

Renewing Certification

The Chesapeake Education, Arts and Research Society (CHEARS) request was presented by Carolyn Lambright-Davis, the group’s convener. She explained the group’s request for in-kind services as it plans to continue its work on the Great Food Transition Project through demonstrations of meals that promote health and climate justice. After a short discussion of the group’s plans for the year, Jordan called CHEARS “resourceful.”

Greenbelt Concert Band requested in-kind services such as storage and performance spaces. Greenbelt Black History and Culture Committee requested access to meeting rooms and use of sound equipment for its programs; Greenbelt Labor Day Festival Committee requested the use of city facilities and Public Works support for the annual festival; and the Greenbelt Farmers Market requested city support for the set-up of the market and use of city electricity. All groups were deemed eligible for certification by the Recreation Department.

Project Grants

The Greenbelt Business Alliance, represented by Mona Reza, noted the success of the awards dinner and gala in FY 2025 and requested a grant to hold another. Council discussed with Reza the group’s plans for nurturing business opportunities in Greenbelt. Greenbelt Access Television, Inc. (GATe) proposed to increase educational opportunities in Greenbelt, particularly at Springhill Lake Elementary School. Frank Gervasi and other representatives explained how the project grant will allow the group to partner with the county school system and a tutoring company to provide literacy services at Springhill Lake Elementary. Julie Winters, speaking for the Friends of the New Deal Café Arts, requested funding for the group’s support for free music festivals to be held in Roosevelt Center. All groups were deemed eligible for a project grant by the Recreation Department.

Operating Grants

Five groups involved with youth sports requested operating grants: Babe Ruth Baseball; Greenbelt Municipal Swim Team;

Greenbelt Soccer Alliance, Inc.; Greenbelt Youth Baseball Little League; and Boys and Girls Club. Council was particularly interested in how the swim team was coping with the inconvenience caused by the closure of the indoor pool, and whether the soccer organization had received enough donations to replace the equipment that had been stolen in October 2024 (see the November 7, 2024, News Review).

Greenbelt Community Orchestra, The SPACE Free Art for All, Greenbelt Makerspace Co-operative and the Greenbelt Arts Center also presented their plans for the use of funds they might receive in an operating grant.

The operating fund request by Greenbelt Refugee Aid Committee (GRACE), represented in the worksession by Frank Gervasi, president, and Joyce Campbell, secretary, received several questions from council concerning their plans for FY 2026. Noting the current inability to bring refugees to the U.S., GRACE plans to provide direct aid to people in conflict areas. Councilmembers stated their desire that funds remain in Greenbelt, and Varda reported that their request for an operating grant had already been reduced.

The city manager’s memorandum states that the proposed FY 2026 budget for Recognition Group grants is $120,400 and that grant requests total $153,375. It notes that “as always, decisions rest with the city council.”

2026 Budget Proposes $46,900 For Advisory Boards, Committees

by Anna Bedford-Dillow

In addition to grants awarded to Recognition Groups annually (see article on page 1), the city also allocates funds to advisory boards and committees. Several of these groups also made requests for funding, though they did not have dedicated council worksessions, as the Recognition Groups did.

The largest request among advisory boards and committees this year came from the Reparations Commission, which requested $29,000 and has an allocation of $23,000 in the proposed budget. The city’s proposed budget also allocates to the Advisory Committee on Education (ACE) a grant of $18,000. Green ACES and the Green Team each have a $1,000 proposed allocation, the Public Safety Advisory Committee (PSAC) has $1,900 and the Forest Preserve Advisory Board (FPAB) has $2,000.

Advisory Board / Committee	Proposed Award
Total	$46,900
Reparations Commission	$23,000
Advisory Committee on Education (ACE)	$18,000
Forest Preserve Advisory Board (FPAB)	$2,000
Public Safety Advisory Committee (PSAC)	$1,900
Green Team	$1,000
Green ACES	$1,000

Grants to advisory boards and committees in the proposed FY 2026 budget

All figures in the proposed budget are only recommendations until council makes their decisions during a final budget review worksession on Wednesday, May 28, and can be amended until the budget adoption, which is scheduled for Monday, June 2.

rent comparability study that is in place through January 2028. A new study in 2027 will help negotiate the rent with HUD and Salmerón expects a significant change in rents in our area will be incorporated. Jordan expressed his dissatisfaction that the rent is based on a study done in 2023, during Covid, and will last until 2028.

Jordan raised the question of smoking, which he described as a “big issue.” Potts responded that there is no smoking on the property. There is a smoking pad on land owned by the city at the back of the property; otherwise, residents must go across the street. Jordan also asked about availability of parking spaces and Batey said there are usually half a dozen available.

It was additionally noted that Meals on Wheels comes to the property five times a week and there’s a city produce distribution there, too.

Bill Orleans, a resident of the city but not Green Ridge House, noted five employees have what he called a “fairly substantial salaries and benefits packet,” and questioned why the city employs a contractor for over $80,000 rather than hiring people directly as city employees and managing the property itself.

“The management company can actually do it more efficiently than the city can,” responded Jordan.

have 20 volunteer members. An Advanced Life Support (ALS) ambulance, an Emergency Medical Services (EMS) duty officer on 24-hour duty and a Basic Life Support (BLS) ambulance surge unit are stationed at the Greenbelt fire house. A BLS ambulance surge unit has the capability to respond to an increase in emergency calls.

The GVFD has approximately $750,000 in an account that the city holds. Much of that total is being saved for the impending retirement of Engine 352, a 2014 Pierce fire truck that is slated to be replaced in 2029 at an estimated cost of over $1 million. In addition, GVFD is currently requesting $80,000 for the replacement of the chief's vehicle, a 2008 Ford. GVFD has a balance of $313,301 in its EMS billing account, which is used to maintain and fuel apparatus and to pay for insurance and additional equipment. This fund fluctuates and relies on reimbursements from the county. Ray reported that the GVFD has made progress on streamlining the reimbursement process. During the question-and-answer period, Ray stated that having an additional half-time position with a focus on marketing and recruitment would be especially helpful.

Police Department
The GPD requested $12,702,100, an 11.63 percent increase from FY 2025. Most of the increase is due to higher pay and benefits as stipulated in the most recent collective bargaining agreement, which aligned the department's pay rates with comparable agencies. Bowers noted that keeping the department fully staffed was a recurring issue that has become more challenging over time, with other municipalities and federal agencies able to offer higher pay and a greater range of secondary assignments. Bowers did note that the GPD's relatively small size had the benefit of providing a more close-knit work environment.

The department currently has four vacancies, and every year there are a handful of departures and new arrivals, a situation that Bowers likened to the transfer portal in college sports. Although the depletion of American Rescue Plan Act funding meant the elimination of a half position in the crisis-intervention team (CIT), Deputy Chief Tim White singled out the CIT work as "phenomenal," praising the work of Rachel Tobin, LCSW, and Officer Michael Thomas. The CIT provides services not only to residents but also to members of the department, who are often in need of support because of the stressful nature of their jobs.

GPD's request included two replacement vehicles after no vehicle replacements in 2025. 36 percent of the departmental fleet has over 100,000 miles, although the benchmark for replacement is not mileage but eight years in service. Greenbelt resident Michael Hartman asked both the GVFD and GPD whether new vehicles could be hybrid or electric and was told that these options were being investigated. In answer to another question by Hartman about training officers to handle encounters with disabled individuals, Bowers mentioned the recent acquisition of a virtual reality training set that allows officers to experience a situation from the perspective of a person with a disability, allowing for a greater degree of empathy and understanding. As a final note, Bowers reported that the renovations to the animal shelter had been completed and that it would be resuming operations in early May.

Eleanor Roosevelt H.S. Spring Sports Season Ends in Disappointing Results

by Patrick Gleason

“These violent delights have violent ends.” Cautionary words from Friar Laurence in Shakespeare’s eternal love story Romeo and Juliet feel fitting to the flurry of success and finality of defeat during the culmination of the Eleanor Roosevelt High School (ERHS) spring sports season. The fullness of spring’s sweet scents and green profusions are the only appropriate backdrop for the high drama of adolescent competition at the highest level.

After enjoying league, county and region championships, the girls and boys lacrosse teams fell in the state quarterfinals on May 14. The girls traded goals with the Perry Hall Gators before succumbing to defeat, while the North County Knights overwhelmed an – until then – undefeated Raider squad in the boys’ bracket.

Tennis

Tennis partners Leon Bailey and Spencer Smith won a state quarterfinal match in boys doubles before falling in the state semifinal, while Anna Grim and Zaina Hall advanced to the quarterfinals in girls doubles.

Softball

The ERHS softball team still held hope for a repeat appearance in the state championship as they faced off with the Winston Churchill High School Bulldogs on May 20 in a game that materialized Friar Laurence’s haunting warning – with a tempestuous series of events determining the season. Pitcher Natalia Jarquin breezed through the Bulldog lineup in the top of the first. Then, shortstop Desiree Fuller made quick work rounding the bases in the first inning. Soon enough, the Raiders had sprinted to an early 3-0 lead. The energy of last season’s state semifinal victory permeated the cool evening air.

Eventually the Bulldogs chipped away with well-placed hits. Midway through the game, they held the lead that previously felt secure. By the bottom of the sixth the Raiders trailed by 2. Senior Nikki Lilja dropped a hit over the right side of the infield and utilized aggressive baserunning to pull the Raiders within one point. In the top of the seventh, Jarquin worked through a tense series of at-bats, to keep the Raider deficit manageable. Fuller returned to bat to lead off the bottom of the seventh and placed the ball past third base. The tying run on, and the heart of the order up, victory appeared imminent. Then, Bree Mullikin and Jarquin struck out, leaving the Raiders with almost definite defeat. With Fuller now on third base, the Bulldogs elected to walk cleanup hitter Samiah Smith. Lilja returned to the plate. Deep in the count, she swung; surely a game-ending groundout to second base. But the throw went awry, Fuller scored, and Smith reached third. Tie game. Possibilities of triumph returned. Felt unavoidable. The dugout reached a fever pitch.

Another long at bat with the winning run 60 feet away. A wild pitch and Smith sprinted home, reaching a leg towards the plate as the throw went high in a cloud of infield dirt. As the air cleared, the umpire made his call: out. The Raider bench and crowd saw otherwise, but the call required extra innings where the palpable delight soured to a violent end.

Leon Bailey and partner Spencer Smith advanced to the state semi-finals in boys doubles a year after Raider Ivanna Canesa earned a spot in the tennis finals.

What Do We Know About The Origins of Memorial Day?

by Lois Rosado

It is not widely known that historically, the first grand Memorial Day (Decoration Day) program was held in Charleston, S.C., organized by formerly enslaved and Free Black American members of that city. They were concerned that the 257 Black Union soldiers that had been buried in a mass grave near a former planter’s racetrack had not been given a proper burial. The soldiers had been captured during the Civil War and were held at the track’s Club House, where many died from disease. Formerly enslaved and Free Black Americans felt that the men deserved a proper homegoing ceremony and decent burial as they had fought to end slavery, particularly in the South. The grave site was dug up and each body was appropriately prepared and re-interred in neat rows; a white fence was erected around the burial site with an archway with signage that stated: Martyrs of the Race Course. A May 1, 1865, march and ceremony was organized by free and formerly enslaved Black Americans and over 10,000 mostly Black residents marched in honor of the fallen soldiers who had valiantly fought to unite the country and free the enslaved. The soldiers were reinterred in 1880 at the National Cemetery in Beaufort, S.C. This Memorial Day celebration and march to honor Union veterans of the Civil War is considered one of the earliest and most memorable. An extensive article was written in Time magazine by Olivia B. Waxman on May 22, 2020, that includes detailed information on Memorial Day in America. A small group of Greenbelt residents gathered on Memorial Day at the Greenbelt Cemetery on Ivy Lane to lay flowers to honor formerly enslaved individuals buried in the Slave section there. On Memorial Day, everyone must remember our fallen veterans and those who are forgotten.

ultimate sacrifice,” Jordan said. “We lay wreaths in their memory and acknowledge their threefold service: to community, to country and to family. ... So, on this Memorial Day 2025, may we unite to realize the enduring peace that our fallen heroes envisioned when they made that ultimate sacrifice.” Post 136 Commander Greg Gigliotti’s presentation described individuals’ final acts of courage and bravery and illustrated why Memorial Day reminds us of the cost of freedom. Said Gigliotti, “Society likes to use the word Hero. There are sports heroes, action heroes and political heroes. But is there any group more deserving of the title than the more than one million men and women who have sacrificed their lives in defense of this nation?” Gigliotti highlighted a gridiron hero named Jack Lummus, an All-American football star and terrific center fielder for Baylor University. “On February 19, 1945, Jack Lummus was among the first to land at Iwo Jima. A leader of a rifle platoon, First Lieutenant Lummus slowly but relentlessly advanced with his men against entrenched enemy forces. He disregarded wounds inflicted upon him by grenade shrapnel and other small arms fire. He neutralized enemy soldiers positioned in three pillboxes before eventually stepping on a landmine,” recounted Gigliotti. “Jack attempted to stand even though his legs and lower torso were badly mangled. Rushed to surgeons who attempted to save his life, Lieutenant Lummus said, ‘Well, Doc, the New York Giants lost a mighty good end today.’ He died on March 8, 1945, and America lost a mighty good hero. For his actions at Iwo Jima 80 years ago, Jack Lummus was posthumously awarded the Medal of Honor. “Lieutenant Jack Lummus was one of the most famous heroes of one of history’s most famous battles. But there are so many others that we can also remember. ... People who died while fulfilling their military missions,” said Gigliotti. He spoke of Navy Lieutenant Commander Lyndsay Evans and Lieutenant Serena Wileman, aviators who both earned multiple combat medals for their actions in the Middle East and conducted multiple 2023 and 2024 combat missions against Houthi terrorists. “On October 15, 2024, the two trailblazing pilots lost their lives when their EA-18G Growler jet crashed during a training exercise near Washington’s Mount Rainier. Even within the safety of the United States, the military is an inherently dangerous profession comprised of professionals willing to sacrifice for us,” said Gigliotti. Sacrifice for others. This was the final act of yet another hero, Army medic Calvin Bouknight. ‘He died so others could live,’ said a eulogizer at a ceremony last year at Arlington National Cemetery. Specialist Bouknight was killed in 1965, shielding four of his fellow soldiers in Vietnam. He was posthumously awarded the Silver Star. Approval for the award was slow, said Gigliotti, as is common, to which many familiar with military medal processes attest. As a result, his original gravestone did not acknowledge his Silver Star. It was through the determination of other veterans that the injustice was finally corrected and his gravestone updated in 2024. “Fifty years ago, the Vietnam War ended,” said Gigliotti. “Much like our withdrawal from Afghanistan, history will be kinder to those who fought the war than it will be to the policymakers who managed it. For it is the veterans – not the politicians – who give us our freedom. “The heroes that we honor today are not exclusive to any gender, race or religion. They come from all economic classes and backgrounds. They hail from all 50 states, and some have migrated from other countries. They are a diverse group wedded to the belief that America is a nation worth dying for. “The heroes that I mentioned had earned prestigious awards and military decorations. But just like the soldiers known only to God, countless veterans have not been recognized for their bravery due to a lack of surviving witnesses who could document their final acts. “They are no less heroic. We are gathered so that we can remember their sacrifices and celebrate the fact that throughout our history, this great country produces such men and women of honor. We must not forget them.”
